THE CHALLENGES

The client was outsourcing some of their accounting work to another supplier but were dissatisfied due to the high error rate on their clients' books of accounts. They were also facing multiple issues with the general quality of the service they were receiving and were not making the savings they had been promised.

They were therefore searching for a reliable and professional supplier who could manage their accounts and maintain quality at the same time.

The requirement for improved accuracy was vital because the client was about to start operating trust accounts whereby they held funds and administered them for their clients. This type of work has its own challenges as it is susceptible to errors while recording transactions, invoices and duplicate payments. We therefore needed to ensure a smooth transition of work from their previous supplier without losing essential time in training and data transfers.

Our client needed a solution which would not hamper their current operations but would enhance their scope of work while maintaining quality and accuracy of their accounting work.

They additionally wanted to reduce their operation costs and also wanted to boost their profitability without compromising on service quality. We were tasked to find a bespoke accounting solution and we set out to provide just that.

THE SOLUTION

Our client knew what they were looking for in terms of services and their expectations from QXAS were clearly specified. Based on our research and understanding, QXAS offered them an end-to-end accounting solution. Initially, QX adopted a structured approach by migrating all the data and records from our client's previous supplier to our office. We followed this up by harmonizing processes to capture records and to improve the turnaround time of work.

We initiated the transition phase in which we migrated all data from their previous supplier and began assessing the reported errors. We developed a strong internal control system to ensure that every transaction and action is documented. We successfully mitigated most of these errors in a record time which enhanced our clients trust in QXAS as an accounts outsourcing supplier.

We mapped their processes and created checks and balances for each of our staff for greater accountability and better management of workflow. We completed all their bookkeeping tasks within the agreed SLA and maintained the highest standard of quality. We accurately managed their tax and accounting transactions with zero errors which increased the efficiency and reduced the time required to prepare an account.

QXAS managed their entire payroll process by employing qualified expert accounting staff who understand federal and state laws. To speed up the transition process, the client provided us with training on the trust accounting software, other members of our team managed the tax season with zero reported errors. This solution not only saved time it also reduced their operating budget.
